EASY TO GROW SUCCULENTS

Choosing succulents to grow can be a very fun, yet overwhelming task. Many people decide to buy succulents because they are “hard to kill” and “anyone can grow them”. While this can be true, some people find themselves killing off every succulent they own. Often this is due to over watering, other times it’s from complete neglect. While many succulents can handle complete neglect, others still need to be carefully taken care of to survive and thrive.

The succulents on the next page are some of my personal favorites that seem to tolerate a fair amount of neglect. You can leave them for several weeks indoors without water and they’ll still look great. They’ll even survive a week or two outside without water as long as they aren’t in direct sun. Between the ten you’ll find various colors and textures so you can combine them to make a lovely arrangement.

If you’re looking for a few great succulents to start your collection, give a few of these a try! Below each description you’ll find a link to purchase the plant online. These are affiliate links.
