Branches of Old Favorites

Perhaps because of the still-struggling economy, many restaurateurs are choosing to open new locations of time-tested brands rather than gamble on new concepts. If you can't get enough of your favorite eateries, you might be in luck – there could be a new location opening near you.

Meatball Shop West Village: Will meatballs become the next ubiquitous NYC food? If the owners of the Meatball Shop have their way, absolutely. A new outpost of their Lower East Side eatery (pictured) is already drawing crowds in Williamsburg, and things should be no different once Daniel Holzman and Michael Chernow unlock the doors at a new West Village branch, which will be about as large as the original (64 Greenwich Ave.; fall).
