As the holiday season approaches in New York, it can only mean one thing: Lots of big group meals. You could convince a restaurant to put some tables together in the main dining room, or you could hook your group up with its own private-dining space. Luckily, some of the best new restaurants in town are also outfitted with secluded sanctuaries — and they don't (all) cost a fortune to reserve. Here are some of the top new spaces in the city, arranged by potential capacity so you can find the perfect fit.

The Meatball Shop: Chelsea

Size: 28 seats

Price: Varies

Underballs is the underground bar beneath the Meatball Shop's Ninth Avenue outpost, and it's available to rent out for private parties. The space includes a projector and pull-down screen so you can create your own video installation.
