

Feed Your Brain at This Weekend's Spoon University Conference

Erica Gonzales

Food & Travel Intern

July 24, 2015

 Follow

Over 300 young food aficionados gathered at the first Brainfood conference last year. (Photo: Becky Hughes)

Over 300 young food aficionados gathered at the first Brainfood conference last year. (Photo: Becky Hughes)

Budding chefs and foodies, gather round.

This Saturday, Spoon University — the famed inter-collegiate food blog network — will host Brainfood 2015, its second annual food and networking conference for young people to learn more about the industry.

Whereas last year's event focused on a number of fields, from tech to media, this time around the focus is on young people innovating and changing the food world, according to Spoon cofounder and CEO Mackenzie Barth.

Attendees will learn from the experts on topics like food technology, startups, sourcing, and entrepreneurial women in the business. Presenters include Yahoo Food's Editor in Chief, Kerry Diamond; Daniel Holzman of The Meatball Shop; editorial director of Brutal Magazine Gheanna Emelia; Reserve's VP Anneke Jong; Gotham Greens' CEO Viraj Puri, and many more.