

Super Bowl XLVI in NYC: eat/drink guide

Where to order in, or party down, when the Giants take on the Pats

By Jeremy Berger

Special to Metromix

February 1, 2012

The big narrative on the field in Super Bowl 46 is Rematch. Four years ago Manning put the kibosh on a perfect Pats season with a Houdini-like escape and long toss to David Tyree. Off the field, there isn't much contest: Boston is an historic sports town, but it's also the kind of place where you go to a bar and order egg rolls and hot wings from the same menu; it's like the chef got concussed by Jason Pierre-Paul and then tried to cook. We don't have that problem here in New York, where there are plenty of places to catch good grub and watch the game. At home or out at a bar, here are some fine options.

Takeout

The Meatball Shop

For the second year in a row we're siding with the guys with the biggest balls. And guess what? He is I am him, slim, with the tilted brim. What's my name? The Meatball Shop. Now with three locations across two boroughs, they're bringing back the buffalo chicken balls with blue cheese and Frank's Hot House for game day, available to-go by the Bucket "O" Balls (25 servings). Order in advance.

\(84 Stanton Street, 212-982-8895\)

\(64 Greenwich Avenue, 212-982-7815\)

\(170 Bedford Avenue, 718-551-0520\)