

MUST-TRY

8 Must-Try NYC Brunches for Fall

By James Mulcahy
September 10, 2013

Now that all of your summer gallivanting has come to an end, you're likely to stick around during the weekend, and that means one thing: brunch. We've rounded up eight new versions of the weekend meal that are worth trying, including standard Bloody Marys to a tailgating party that will hook you up with some free shots every time your team scores a touchdown.

Meatball Shop UES

Sure, you can get plenty of meatballs at this mini-chain around NYC, but only the newest Upper East Side location will hook you up with the breakfast burger, served during weekend brunch (it's the only location to have the weekend mid-day meal). It consists of meatballs, a fried egg and bacon on a bun, and it's also known as the dish that will cure your hangover.

1462 Second Ave.; 212-257-6121