

EAT AND DRINK

NYC food events: Where to taste all kinds of food and drink this fall

By Meredith Deliso and Nicole Levy nicole.levy@amny.com August 30, 2017

'Tis the season to stuff yourself.

Whether you love tasting pie, eating street food or exploring new neighborhoods, there's a foodie event for you this fall.

Here are the big food-centric festivals that may entice you over the next few months:

TASTE Williamsburg Greenpoint (Sept. 17)

The North Brooklyn block party-style tasting event is back with live music and more than 50 restaurants, bars, breweries and wineries participating. Those including old favorites like The Meatball Shop (pictured) and newcomers like the Peruvian restaurant Llama Inn and the Georgian bistro Cheeseboat. Proceeds benefit the Firehouse North Brooklyn Community Center, which is on track to reopen its door: this year. 1-5 p.m., tickets are $35 (covering four tastes and two drinks) to $85 (eights tastes, four drinks and early access); Williamsburg waterfront, 90 Kent Ave., tastewg.com

(Credit: David Katz)

