Denison University was founded in 1831 as the Granville Literary and Theological Institution and renamed Denison University in the mid-1850s. Denison is one of the earliest colleges to be established beyond the Allegheny Mountains and north of the Ohio River. Founded by ambitious frontier people who were determined to nurture leadership for the nation, its focus on preparing effective leaders and active citizens remains an essential part of Denison's mission today. The University is one of the nation's leading liberal arts colleges with a vibrant, residential community of 2,300 undergraduate students and a student to faculty ratio of 9:1, ensuring that students are more than a number, and that they become active participants in their own educational experience. The University offers 65 academic programs and four pre-professional programs that lead to three undergraduate degrees. Denison University fields 26 athletic teams that compete at the NCAA Division III level in the North Coast Athletic Conference. Denison's extracurricular options for students include more than 160 student organizations that provide over 600 opportunities for campus leadership. These opportunities are provided on a pedestrian-friendly campus designed by pioneering landscape architect Frederick Law Olmsted. The more than 900-acre campus features the 250-acre hilltop section, a 350-acre Biological Reserve, and historic Denison Golf Club. With an endowment of $1.1 billion, Denison commits over $70 million towards student financial aid each year in the form of need-based and merit-based scholarships. Success for Denison students continues after graduation with 92 percent of graduates employed, in graduate school, or completing service within six months of graduation. Ninety six percent of Denison's 28,000 alumni are working in their desired field or position, or on their way to achieving their professional goals.

Denison University promotes active learning to deliver on its mission to inspire and educate students to become autonomous thinkers, discerning moral agents, and active citizens of a democratic society. It provides a curriculum that balances breadth with depth, building academic specialization upon a liberal arts foundation in the arts, sciences, social sciences, and humanities. A Denison education is more than what happens in the classroom. The focus of student life is on the whole person, providing a living-learning environment sensitive to the individual needs yet grounded in a concern for community.
