

THE HUNGRIEST TWINS IN TENNIS

The Hungriest Twins in Tennis

Posted In April 2, 2015

Tennis stars, the Bryan Brothers, dish out their top food picks in Miami

Getty Images

Right on time of the first bouncing ball at the Miami Open, AYS hosted the inaugural Taste of Tennis Miami presented by Citi® on Monday, March 23rd poolside at W South Beach Hotel & Residences. Taste of Tennis Miami brought together professional athletes, top chefs and luxury brands for an unforgettable evening of gourmet food, interactive sponsor experiences, signature cocktails and appearances by the world's best tennis players.

In the spirit of bringing tennis and food together, we asked doubles team Bob and Mike Bryan where they eat out in Miami. The Bryan Brothers not only hold the number one position in male tennis doubles, but they are also hungry twins who finish each other's sandwiches.

And if there is one thing we know about twins (oh, and trust us, we know twins) is that they always have a preference when it comes to food. One likes broccoli and well, the other likes the cheese.

Mike's top 3 in Miami are Casa Tua, Michy's (which closed last year and recently announced its re-opening) and a newbie in Hallandale Beach called Wapo Taco (which will soon be opening it's second store front in Coral Gables). Mike went on to say, "It's right next to my house, I go twice a day— insane, straight out of Mexico, best tacos in town." Mike, we couldn't agree with you more.

Brian, on the other hand, claimed to be more of a "health freak" (his words, not ours). He recommended Miami Juice for anything gluten free, delicious smoothies and juices as well as, Jungle Juice in Sunny Isles and Nobu.