

The best group dining and meal deals in New York

If you're having dinner with friends, head to one of the best restaurants in NYC for group dining to feast on crowd-pleasing plates

By Rheanna O'Neil Bellomo Thu Nov 20 2014

It can be tough to please a crowd when planning dinner for a large party. Luckily, these New York restaurants offer feasts made specifically for group dining, so you can share some serious bounty. Blowout dinners like these involve digging into massive amounts of meat, including fried chicken and a giant suckling pig, a slew of sides and some of the city's best desserts. Go hog wild with our guide to dining with a group of any size.

The Meatball Shop

The Meatball Shop

$$$$

Groups can stuff themselves on the cheap at this popular minichain. For $22 a head, you'll get a family-style spread that includes two meatball choices (spicy pork, chicken, beef or veggie), two sauces (spicy meat, classic tomato, Parmesan cream or mushroom gravy), three sides (such as mashed potatoes, rigatoni or white beans) and two ice cream sandwiches for dessert for the whole party to share. If your entourage is on the small side, the regular menu is still a bargain—nothing is more than $10 except drinks. Reserve at least two weeks in advance.

170 Bedford Ave, (between North 7th and 8th Sts)

MORE INFO