By Carissa Chesanek | April 17, 2015

This season brings new big openings from some big-name chefs. Here are three soon-to-open spots you'll want to check out.

CENA by Michy

After closing last year for a full revamp, Michy's, Michelle Bernstein's popular eatery in MiMo, plans to reopen later this month with a brand-new name (translated to "the main meal of the day" in Spanish), design and concept, plus chefs from Illegal Bakery and 27 Restaurant & Bar helping in the kitchen to whip up roasted sunchokes with smoked almonds and crunchy porchetta with braised peaches.

Sunny's

DC-based Top Chef star Spike Mendelsohn plans to open a beachy-style cafe in Miami Beach this summer inside The Hall boutique hotel (also opening this summer), offering casual seafood plates in a low-key setting.

Continental Miami

This highly anticipated new concept from Stephen Starr is officially set to open this summer adjacent to the Aloft Hotel in SoBe and will be reminiscent of the original Philly hot spot with a '70s retro-diner vibe and innovative eclectic fare.
