

NEW YORK CITY ▾

GUIDE

Where to Eat Brunch this Weekend: UES Meatball Shop

By Anne Roderique Jones
August 30, 2013

While every Meatball Shop is off-the-charts delicious, they're not all created equal. Here's why: The fifth addition to this cult-favorite meatery serves brunch on Saturday and Sunday in their Upper East Side location. With 116 seats and a 40-seat back room, this extra-large space is special for owners Michael Chernow and Daniel Holzman, who met and became besties in this 'hood.

Now back to brunch. It's ball-centric with their version of a meatball breakfast sandwich made with breakfast sausage; and there's the Balls Benedict: a comfy respite from the Canadian bacon version, a Balls Biscuits and Gravy, and the creamy Balls Florentine. All options are easily worth the trek uptown – and the enviable wait (1462 Second Ave.).