

FOOTBALL AND FOOD

The Ultimate NYC Eating Guide To Super Bowl XLVIII, Part I

The best catering deals for watching game at home

Jan 27, 2014 9:00 am

BY GEORGE EMBIRICOS

Would you rather go to a Super Bowl party thrown by a sorry, mediocre host or by THE BEST HOST IN THE LEAGUE?! (Obligatory Richard Sherman reference. Boom.) We all know that the food spread is second to none in terms of game day importance, right ahead of the commercials and betting on the coin toss and length of the national anthem. Meanwhile, the big game itself takes a back seat to it all. But where to watch, and what to eat?

Related: Super Bowl Party Food: 5 Ways To Mail-Order Yourself Some Bragging Rights

When it comes to mapping out your Super Bowl plans, the options are seemingly endless. Host friends at home? Head to a bar? Brave an outdoor tailgate party? That's where we come in. We've researched the best food options for this year's Super Bowl in New York City and divided them into three categories – hosting at home, watching at a bar or restaurant and splurging at events. Whether you want to kick back and eat an endless amount of wings on your couch, stuff your face at a local watering hole or rub elbows with big name chefs on Super Bowl Sunday, we've got you covered. Here are the best catering deals (available either for local pick-up or delivery), comprising Part I of our guide. Check back Wednesday for Part II, featuring NYC bar and restaurant viewing parties and star-studded events.

THE MEATBALL SHOP

Bucket O' Balls 25-Count Order

Meatballs including the buffalo chicken flavor with blue cheese dressing. $45

Available for pick-up at all five NYC locations, meatballshop.com