

LIVING &gt; FOOD

Fermenting, Broccoli Cores, and “Bowls”: Chefs Share What We’ll Be Eating in 2016

DECEMBER 21, 2015 11:25 AM

by SAMANTHA REES

“I’m seeing a lot more interest in Asian drinking food, specifically more regional Chinese. China has an amazingly broad culinary culture—each region has a different climate, agricultural crop, growing season, et cetera. We will see more and more regionally specific Chinese dishes finding their way onto menus.”

—Daniel Holzman, The Meatball Shop