

GUIDE:

The Best Late Night Restaurants In NYC

By Bryan Kim

It's 3 a.m., and your self-restraint is lying on the bar alongside the change from your last whiskey ginger. Earlier in the night, you had a two-track mind, but now it's getting late, and there's only one thing you can think of. You suppress the thought, but your body keeps reminding you.

You need some g*ddamn food.

Here's where to get it.

The Meatball Shop

The Meatball Shop was crazy busy when it opened. Now, other restaurants are serving cheap-ish good food, and it's not so crowded anymore. But it's still the same food, and the one on Stanton is still open until 4 on the weekends (as is the one in Williamsburg). The best part is you don't even have to talk. Make your food selections with a marker on a laminated menu, and no one will notice you're too drunk to make even the simplest words.
