Deflategate may be on the minds of Super Bowl fans everywhere in advance of the February 1 game, but that doesn't mean you need to deflate your expectations for the annual snacking. From meatballs and Cambodian sandwiches to whole-roasted pigs and taquitos, here are five awesome takeout options that'll get your tastebuds as excited about the big game as you are.

Bucket O' Balls at the Meatball Shop

Despite the tongue-in-cheek name, the always-popular Meatball Shop's Bucket O'Ballsspecialis no laughing matter. The package includes 25 balls of any type (spicy pork, beef, chicken, veggie or the daily ball — on game day, it's a pizza ball) and any sauce (classic tomato, spicy pork, spinach basil pesto, mushroom gravy or parmesan cream) — all for $45. Partyers can call any of the Meatball Shop's six locations (on the Lower East Side, Upper East Side, Upper West Side, and in the West Village and Williamsburg) up until game day to pick up their buckets. Various locations
