Where to Eat on Easter Across America

Restaurants across the country will revitalize their menus for the holiday this weekend

Here at The Daily Meal, we know that while Easter should generally be a relaxing time spent with loved ones, if you're the one preparing the meal, it can be a hectic endeavor. In the interest of making your holiday run as smoothly as possible, we've put together a roundup of some of the Easter restaurant happenings nationwide so you can skip the cooking and spend more time fussing over the Easter basket.

The Meatball Shop's flagship location on the Lower East Side will launch brunch on Easter Sunday. Available from noon until 4 p.m., the playful brunch menu features a ball-inspired spin on classic dishes such as "Balls, Biscuits & Gravy," topped with two fried eggs; "Balls Benedict," two poached eggs, bacon, choice of meatballs and hollandaise on a brioche bun; and "Smash Bun French Toast" served with house made apple sauce and maple syrup. They have created a special "Bunny Ball" in celebration of Easter Sunday! This is a delicious meatball made out of, you guessed it, rabbit. Seasoned with rosemary, parsley, fennel and white wine, this flavorful rabbit-based meatball is available at all locations of The Meatball Shop (Lower East Side, Greenwich Village, Upper East Side, Lower East Side, Williamsburg and Chelsea) on their lunch and dinner menus for Easter (4.19-20).
